THE boll-worm has appeared in Tate county, Mississippi. Should hot, dry weather now set in, the pest will not be able to do any damage.

This is good news indeed. A telegram from Dublin to Landon says: "The weather all over Ireland, up to the present time, has been favorable, and it is expected that the potato crop will be enormous. It promises to exceed anything seen in Ireland since the period anterior to the famine of 1847. Root and cereal crops are all luxuriant."

THE committee on constitution and by-laws of that newly-formed Society for the Prevention of Dueling in South Carelina must have asked more time to report, as a meeting took place yesterday between Colo-nel Cash and Colonel Shannon, of that State, in which the latter was promptly dropped in his tracks by a ball from the saw-handle of his antagonist.

THE question as to who should fall into the soft place of naval officer at New Orleans was settled yesterday by the appointment of Andrew J. Dumont. Jim Lewis, who has been keeping the nest warm for somebody for a few months, is on the suspended list, and will probably turn up in a few days as a howling Hancock man-one of the fellows who always knew the convention could nominate no other man and win.

THE following sound business advice is from the New York Public, and it is worth reflective attention:

It is best to reflect that the business of the country can hardly resume confident and vigorous activity until the outcome of the crops is approximately known, until the demand from abroad can be calculated with some accuracy, and until the future of the coal and fron trades can be anticipated. We shall not know before the first of September whether a full yield of grain will be secured, and can probably be marketed. Until that time, it will be a master of great uncertainty whether the prices will be such as to induce free sales of products by the western farmers, and it they do not sell friely they will not buy largely. A small movement of grain and of the merchandise sent west in exchange for it, will give the railroads a scauty traffic sert fall and winter, and it is highly improbable that there will not be periods of uncertainty and disheartenment during the next two or three months.

Staunton, Virginia, died at Saratoga yesterday afternoon, aged seventy-seven. Dr. university. When George Peabody gave the fund for educational purposes in the south, Dr. Sears was made manager of the fund. He then went to live in Virginia. He went to Saratoga about a month ago for his health, and was to have delivered an address before American institute of instruction. Wednesday evening, on "Education and Its Progress in the United States During the Last Fifty Years."

PROSPECTS of the grain market are excitng general attention, as upon them depends our retention of the extra gold that is in the country, or its return to Europe. The latest European news leads to the expectation that there will be a fair but not full harvest there. and foreign supplies will be necessary to some extent. This will prevent prices rising as high as they did last year. Lower prices will rostrict exportation from some of the countries that could make a profit at last year's prices, while the large crop we expect here will enable us to sell at the reduction. Except storms or some great disaster, grain cannot but be cheap here this season.

THE Arkansas Democratic State committee is making arrangements for an early and carnest canvass of that State before the September election. Among the speakers announced are Senators Garland and Walker, and Hons. William M. Fishback, Jordan Cravens, W. F. Slemons and J. N. Smithee. The committee says: "The advisability of the adoption or rejection of the pending constitutional amendment is not a partisar question, and every Democrat has been left free by his party to vote as his best judgment may dictate. This question will be discussed pro and con by the Democratic speakers, according to their personal views, but whatever the views of any Democrat may be, there must be no division on the State ticket."

Is we enter a house and see barrels of white lead, papers of colored figment, size, and paint brushes lying about, we know hat the painters are coming, but we know they do not come until they are sent for. We see in an exchange paper that lies before us an editorial article headed, "Is the Cholera Coming?" The answer may be given as in the case of the painters, if the requisite imements and ingredients for cholers are lying about. If the streets and alleys are dirty, the gutters smelling offensively, water standing here and there in puddles; if there are vegetables exposed for sale that were got from the gardens two weeks before, crates of cabbage that fill the air around with pernicious odors, cucambers shriveled by long keeping, unripe fruits that look mellow because they are beginning to decay, and if the egetables are eaten in the family, and the fruits are devoured by the children and young men and women, we should think it very probable that the cholera was coming, like the painters, because it has been sent for.

In reviewing the business attitude of afairs it is impossible not to be struck with the weakness betrayed by the iron interest When business revived iron sprung up to fabulous prices, and all was feverish movenent and hurry. When a check came, down fell iron prices with a suddenness that was estounding. When a business meets with ery is doubtful. these sorts of ups and downs it is not on a good basis. Let the reader mark well that the iron interest is the especial pet of "protec-tion." It is not a healthy offspring, but a sickly shoot, dependent not upon its own oundness, its adaptation to demand and supply, meeting its own expenses and making its own profits, but it is dependent upon artificial aid, like a foundling fed from the bottle-it is sickly, puny, and wilts away under every adverse blast. If any inquirer desires to know whether "protection," which but to know the history of protection's pet, the iron trade, to discover that protection is a bridge that always fails most conspicuously stronger, and used to better advantage. a bridge that always fails most conspicuously when aid is most needed.

Colonel Shannon denied to the last his having reflected on Mrs. Cash. Legal proceedings caused ithe trouble, and he challenged Cash on account of the latter's abusive publications cencerning him. Sr. Louis, July 6.—A small fire broke out in a cellar at 714 Locust street about noon today, and as Phelem Toole, a fireman, was using a Holloway fire-extinguisher, it exploded and killed him. Toole was captain of the Pompier corps of the fire department, and the man who made himself faunous by rescuing so many people from the Southern hotel, when it burned several years ago. His death will be greatly felt by the fire department, and will be universally mourned. An examination this afternoon by the coroner disclosed the fact that Toole's death was caused by a tlow from a brass cock of the ner disclosed the fact that Toole's death was caused by a llow from a brass cock of the extinguisher, which, when the explosion occurred, was blown out, and struck him on the breast directly over the heart, snapping the ribs like pipe stems, and forcing the broken pieces into the heart and the lower part of the lungs, lacerating them in a terrible manner. The bottom of the cylinder was also blown off and an inspection showed that only solder had been used in making the joint on the apparatus designed to bear the pressure of eighty to one hundred pounds to the square in.h. The verdict of the coroner's jury was in accordance with the above facts, jury was in accordance with the above facts, and also states that the extinguisher was defectively made. Toole will be buried Thursday. All the engine houses in the city are draped in black, and the whole department is not only in mourning but in deep affliction and sorrow at their loss. Just try "steeping" it for a few hours in cold water, using a little more tea than for the hot beverage, and little more tea than for the hot beverage, and having it strong enough to be weakened with ice-water when it is served. The flavor and effect are much better than by the hot-water method. And, by the way, the same plan is coming to be recognized as the best for many of the herb-teas used for medicinal purposes, especially such as thoroughwort (boneset), and others, which, steeped in hot water, produce an unpleasant and indesirable napses.

Washington special to the Chicago Times; "A damn clam Yankee" is what Boss Shepherd called Marshall Jewell when he was in Grant's cabinet. His election as chairman of the National committee is regarded by the conservative Republicans here as positive proof that all of the Grant leaders intend to remain in the background and take no active part in the campaign. Marshall Jewell is a grossly incompetent man for the place. He is an egotistical, unpopular, untrustworthy man, who is

HATED SINCERELY by all the Grant people. He is about five feet eight inches in hight; his head is large and well set off by snowy white, luxuriant hair; his complexion is of a clear pink-and white his eyes are blue and fishy; his nose small straight and red. A snowy-white mustach and goatee set off a full, red-lipped, sensuous lined mouth, that is always ready to smile and display a Mr. Carker set of shining white teeth. He is rich, and a would-be aristocrat, without ability. He was GROSSLY INCOMPETENT in the management of the postoffice department. President Grant demanded his resignation for duplicity in the matter of the Boston postmastership. Jewell, when in official life, advertised himself well at one of his relite, advertised himself well at one of his receptions by having champagne in one of his rooms for official guests, and sherry in the other for the untitled guests. In addition to his snobbish vulgarity, he is as fine a target as Garfield for criticism. All one will have to do is to go to the records of the surpeme court to find Marshall Jawell's character.

Probably no man in public life has ever in-

REPLECTION UPON HIS PERSONAL HONESTY than were passed upon Jewell by the supreme court of the United States in the fall term o court of the United States in the fall term of 1876. In this decision it was shown that Jewell, by unfair means, got possession of the property of a poor woman in Detroit through taking advantage of her weakness of mind. The court set the title aside, and used very plain language in so doing. Sait was brought by Eti Alior, heir-at-law of Mary E. Genevieve Thibault, late of Detroit, Michigan, to cancel a conveyance of land alleged to have been obtained from her but a few weeks bebeen obtained from her but a few weeks be-fore her death, when, from her condition she was incapable of understanding the nature and effect of the transaction. The following extract from the DECISION OF THE SUPREME COURT shows the nature of the transaction. Deceased died at Detroit, on the fourth of February, aged sixty-four, intestate, leaving complainant her sole surviving heir-at-law. For many years previous to her death and until execution of the conveyance to defendant she was seized in fee of the land in controversy, situated in that city, which she occupied as a homestead. In November, 1863, defendant obtained from her a conveyance of the property. A copy of the conveyance is this property. A copy of the conveyance is set forth in the bill. It contains covenant of seisin and warranty of grantor, and im mediately following them an AGREEMENT BY DEVENDANT to pay her two hundred and htty dollars upon delivery of the instrument, an annuity of five hundred dollars, all her physician's bills during her life; also, that she should have the use and occupation of the house until the spring of 1864, or that he would pay the rent of such other house as she might occupy until then. The property was then worth, according to the testimony in the case, between six thousand and eight thousand doltween six thousand and eight thousand dol-lars. The decessed was at that time between sixty and seventy years of age, and was con-fined to her house by sickness, from which she never recovered. She lived alone in a state of degradation, and was without regustate of degradation, and was without regu-lar attendance in her sickness. There were no persons present with her at the execution of the conveyance except defendant, his agent, and his attorney. The two hundred and fifty dollars stipulated for was paid, but no other payment was made to her. She

ROUNDS FOR CANCELLING CONVEYANCE complainant alleges that deceased, during infirm as to be incapable of transacting any business of importance; that her last sickness aggravated her insanity, greatly weakened her mental faculties, and still more disquali-fied her for business; that defendant and his agent knew of her infirmity, and that there was no reasonable prospect of her recovery from her sickness or of her long surviving when the conveyance was taken; that she did not understand the nature of the instrument, and that it was obtained for an insignificant consideration and in a clandestine manner, with sideration and in a claudestine manner, with-out her having any independent advice. These allegations defendant controverts, and avers the conveyance was taken upon a proposition of deceased; that at the date of APPRECIATED THE VALUE OF HER PROP and was capable of contracting with reference to it and of selling or otherwise dealing it; that since her death he occupied and made that since her death he occupied and made permanent improvements to the value of seven thousand dollars, and that complainant never gave him notice of any claim to the property until commencement of this suit. The court below dismissed the bill, whereupon complainant appealed to the supreme court, which reversed the decision of the lower court. After reviewing the testimony taken in the case, the decision of

THE SUPREME COURT SAYS: In view of the circumstances stated, we are not satisfied that the deceased was, at the time she executed the conveyance, capable of comprehending fully the nature and effect of the transaction. She was in a state of physical prostration, and from that cause and her previous infirmities, aggravated by and her previous infirmities, aggravated by her sickness, her intellect was greatly enfeebled, and if not disqualified, she was unfitted to attend to business of such importance as the disposition of her entire property and securing an annuity for life. Certain it is that in negotiating for the disposition of the property she stood, in her sickness and infirmities, on no terms of equality with defendent here who with the attenues and fendant here, who, with his attorney and agent, met her alone in her house to obtain the conveyance.

The court further says: "The principle upon which the court acts in such cases, of protecting the weak and dependent, may always be lovoked on behalf of persons in the situation of the deceased, a spinster, in this case of doubtful sanity, living entirely by herself, without friends to take care of her, and confined to her room by sickness. As well on this ground as on the ground of weakness of mind and gross inadequacy of consideration, we think the case a proper one for interference of equity, and that a cancel-lation of the deed should be decided." The court accordingly reversed the decree of the lower court and remanded the cause, with directions to enter a decree for a can-cellation of the deed of deceased and a surrender of the property to complainant, but without accounting for back-rents, improve-ments being taken for them. The opinion was signed by six justices of the supreme bench. Justice Field delivered the opinion.

TURKEY.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 6 .- The La Turelaborate defense of the action of the government with regard to the treaty of Berlin. It says: "The Porte's negotiations with Greece were frustrated by the inordinate pretensions of the latter. The delay in the Montenegrin question is owing to circumstances over which the Porte has no control. The sultan is anxious to introduce reforms, but cannot do so owing to the uncertain condition of the country." The article then accuses Europe of failing to execute its obligations toward Turkey. It charges that the sultan has not been put in possession of the Belkans, Bulgaria has not been forced to demolish her forti, and the pungations toward the office would seem to fail, is on his way bome, while Mirzin still lives and wants to have a sultan and ministers have fail.

Mr. Maynard, under the about international code prevailing, was both judge and jury, and doubtless came to a correct conclusion, as the murder was a most dastardly one. The Times severely condemns the compensation-for-disturbances-in-Ireland act, but says if it becomes a law the landlords will

> It will be interesting to our army men to know the details, just published, of the rations of the British soldier in the field. A mound of bread, a pound of fresh meat, three-quarters of a pound of flour, and at the discretion of the commanding efficer and medical staff, a pint of porter or half a gill of spirits form the daily ration. As it is not always practicable to obtain fresh bread, fresh meat, or fresh vegetables, three quarters of a pound of biscuit, flour or rice are to be considered equivalent to the ration of bread; a pound of silt meat, or three-quarters of a pound of preserved meat, may be substituted for the fresh meat ration, and two ounces of preserved vegetables, or a quarter of a pound of onions or leeks, may take the place of fresh vegetables.
